The Pawned Watch.

BY REBECCA HARDING DAVIS.

'Taking the line 3, 4 as the base, I'—

David Kershaw's eyes wandered from the book to the window. There was nothing to be seen there but a red brick wall, about three feet distant. Then they traveled wearily over the walls of his room, with their soiled red and yellow paper, the bare floor, the cheap pine table piled with books, the cot-bed in the corner.

'If one had even a fire or a stove!' he muttered, kicking at the black grating of the register, through which a feeble supply of warm air crept into the room.

He took up his book, scowling impatiently.

'If I take 3, 4 as the base'——and again the book dropped on his knee. 'Four years of this! Four years of utter solitude! You've taken too big a contract, Dave! You can't go through with it!' and he fell to staring gloomily at the bricks outside of the window.

David Kershaw was a country boy, used to a free, out-door life, to a big house, with roaring fires, and to a large, gay family of young people. He had been working for years for the money to carry him through college, and had come up to begin his course three months ago.

He had not an acquaintance in the great city. He rented his attic room, bought his dinner for ten or fifteen cents at a cheap eating-house, and ate crackers and cheese for breakfast and supper. His clothes were coarse and ill-fitting, and he was painfully conscious of it, and held himself haughtily aloof from his fellow students. College lads are not apt to break through any shell of pride and sullenness to find the good fellow beneath. They simply let David alone, with a careless indifference more galling than dislike.

He plodded silently from the college to his bare room, and thence to the miserable eating-house day after day.

Being naturally a genial, friendly fellow, the thought of the four long, lonely years to come sickened him.

He threw up the window presently and put his head out to catch a glimpse of the street into which the alley opened. A young man on horseback passed at the moment. It was Jourdan Mitchener, one of his class. He rode a blooded mare, and was fully equipped in corduroy coat and knickerbockers, cream-colored leggings, and gauntlets.

'A regular swell!' thought Kershaw, laughing good-humoredly. He had noticed this Cræsus of the college before. 'He has a good, strong face. Well, luck's unevenly divided in this world!' taking up his book with a sigh.

Half an hour later there was a knock at the door. David opened it, expecting to see his landlady, but there stood Mitchener, smiling, whip in hand.

'Mr. Kershaw?' lifting his hat. 'Ashamed not to have known you before, but there are such a lot of us fellows, you know. Thanks, yes,' taking a chair. 'My mother saw your name in a catalogue, and sent me to tell you that your mother and she were schoolmates and friends, 'Daisy' and 'Lily'—that sort of thing I believe. My mother married a city man, and for that reason, during the years that have passed, has lost sight of her old schoolmates who lived away from the city.'

'And my mother married a farmer, and has been poor all of her life,' interrupted David, morosely.

'Yes, yes. American life! Up to-day and down to-morrow,' carelessly.

Something in Mitchener's manner made his wealth and David's poverty appear paltry accidents, to which they, as men, were loftily superior. Before they had been together ten minutes, David felt his morbid gloom disappear. He began to talk naturally and laugh heartily. 'This Mitchener was a thorough good fellow,' he wrote home that night. 'Was not conscious, apparently, that he was worth a dollar.'

The truth was that Jourdan fully appreciated the value of his father's great wealth, but he was a well-bred and courteous young fellow, and knew how to put a poor and awkward lad at ease.

Kershaw was invited to dinner at Mrs. Mitchener's on Sunday. He went about the next day after this dinner in a daze of delight, as if he had been passing through a golden mist and had brought some of it still clinging to him. He hummed a tune, as he pored over his problems. He did not see the bare floor and hideous wall-paper, but the beautiful home in which he had been treated as an honored guest. The Persian carpets, the statuary, the table brilliant with flowers and silver, even the delicious flavors of the dishes lingered gratefully on his long-starved palate. He had met, too, women more charming and men more gently-bred than any he had ever known before.

What a world they lived in! He was even yet bewildered by his glimpse into it. Every luxury and delight waited on the lifting of their hands. Libraries, galleries of art, operas, balls, voyages to Europe, to the Nile! This was life! He wanted more of it—more of it.

Mrs. Mitchener had asked him to come often; had offered to introduce him to her friends, 'a gay young set,' she said. He walked up and down the room, flushed and panting. He had never dreamed of such a world! He must see more of it! How stale and dull the Latin and mathematics seemed now!

But how to compass it? He could not go again without a dress-suit. He had seen one that day in a second hand shop, very cheap. His blood grew hot at the idea of wearing some other man's cast-off clothes, but he pushed that thought aside.

How could he raise the money? He drew out his watch. It was a good one, the one luxurious possession in the family. His father had solemnly given it to him when he left home, saying:

'It was my father's. I've kept it in my bureau drawer for twenty years. Take it, David. You're goin' out into the world. You'll never disgrace it, my boy. Remembering the old man's face as he said this, David thrust it back into his pocket.

'What a snob I am! To part with daddy's watch for a suit of old clothes!'

But the next moment he thought that he could pawn it. He would soon have it back. Save the money, or earn it—somehow.

It was not as if he were yielding to a vicious temptation of the town—gambling or drinking. The society of these high bred people would elevate, educate him. There was a tap at the door, and Mitchener came in.

'No, can't sit down; I'm in a hurry. Brought a message from my mother. She would like to have you join an opera party to-night. Eight or ten young people. Meet at our house, box at the opera, and back to supper afterward. You'll come? That's right. Good morning!'

No! no! Stay! Mr. Mitchener!' His common-sense suddenly rose strong and clear. 'I ought not to begin this life. It's your life, not mine. I'm a poor man. I have four years of hard work here before me, and after that my living to earn. Even the hour at your house yesterday ruined me for study to-day.'

'Well! well!' said Jourdan, carelessly. 'Don't be so vehement about it. Going once to the opera will not make you a man of fashion for life. Think it over and come. Give the college the go-by for a day.

'Oh, by the way!' he added, coloring a little. 'Can I be of pecuniary service to you, Kershaw? No, don't be offended. I have more of the filthy lucre than I know what to do with. The fact is, I was just going to buy a terrier that I don't want. Now, if I could lend the money to you, it would be a real pleasure to me.

'Thank you!' Kershaw stammered, touched, yet angry. 'I do not need any money. I have everything I need—clothes and all,' he added, with a gulp.

'Now I am in for it!' he groaned, when Mitchener was gone. 'If I don't go to their party, they'll think I had no clothes fit to wear. The watch has to go!'

He paced the floor, one minute blaming himself for a snob, the next thrilled with delight at the thought of the evening's pleasure. His books lay neglected all day. He could not quiet the raging whirl and confusion in his mind enough to think of study.

He decided on nothing until nearly dark, when he rushed out, pawned the watch for one-fourth its value, and bought the evening suit. There was not money enough left to buy the shoes, gloves, etc., necessary to complete the dress. When he was ready to go, even his inexperienced eye could see that his costume did not set on him as if it were made for him.

But what matter? His friends—his welcome—the music. Who would care what clothes he wore?

Arrived at Mrs. Mitchener's, he did not find himself at all at ease. That lady was quite occupied with her duties as hostess, and received him with careless civility, giving her attention to her other guests. They talked of people and things of which he knew nothing. The tall awkward lad, his hair carefully oiled and parted, his red hands protruding from his short coat-sleeves, sat silent, and felt thoroughly miserable and out of place. Now and then he thought he saw one of the dainty women near by scanning him with furtive glances.

They drove to the opera-house and entered one of the proscenium boxes. David had a seat at the back, where he could catch but an occasional glimpse of the stage and the brilliant audience. He had been the leader of the choir at home, and fond of the waltzes and marches which his sister played on the old piano, and fancied himself a connoisseur in music. But he was not educated to understand this music.

A very pretty, flighty young lady, Mrs. Bellew, who was the chaperone of the party, tried politely to make him talk to her, but in vain. She turned to Jourdan at last with a shrug of her bare shoulders.

'Your friend,' she whispered, 'seems to be absorbed by his own thoughts. He does not look as if he were enjoying himself. Who is he?'

'One of my mother's last hobbies; a student in the college from the country,' he replied in the same tone.

They turned to the stage. Kershaw saw their smiles, and knew they were talking of him. His brain was on fire. Why had he come here? Was he not the equal of these dainty folk, as well-born, as virtuous, as clever, as they? They dared to despise him because he was awkward and ill-dressed!

In his embarrassment and misery he thrust his hand into the breast pocket of his coat, and drew out a little painted paper tablet, which he fingered mechanically, scarcely noticing what it was until he saw Mrs. Bellew's eyes fixed on it with amazement and suspicion. When the curtain fell on the first act, she came back to him, making some incoherent remarks about the play, while she looked at him keenly. Suddenly she grew pale, and interrupting herself in the middle of a sentence, said to Kershaw: 'Will you be good enough at the close of the next act to go with me and Mr. Mitchener into the ante-room? I would like to speak with you.'

When they had reached the anteroom at the close of the act, she said: 'I have a most disagreeble question to ask Mr. Kershaw. Our house was robbed by burglars last Monday, and silver and jewelry and clothes were taken. Among the rest was an evening suit of my husband's. You have it on!'

'Aren't you mistaken, Mrs. Bellew?' said young Mitchener. 'One dress suit is exactly like another, and—'

'My husband,' she went on, excitedly, 'wore it to a ball the night before it was stolen. As we came home, he put my tablet, with my dances on it, in one pocket. In the other was my ruby ring, which was too large for my glove. Mr. Kershaw has the tablet in his pocket.'

Kershaw mechanically thrust his hand into the pocket of the coat, and brought out the tablet and a second later the ring, which had caught in the lining and so escaped the notice of the thief. He silently held them out to her. The power of speech and action seemed to be frozen out of him with horror. Mitchener looked at him excitedly, but said, politely:

'Have you any objections to telling Mrs. Bellew how the suit came in your possession?'

Kershaw stared at him a moment, full of repugnance and contempt for himself. These were 'his new friends,' this was the party he had parted with his old father's gift to enter!

'I did not, of course, steal the clothes,' he said at last. 'You cannot really think I did that. But I bought them at a pawnshop to-day. I pawned my watch to do it. I wanted to come here.'

'All right! all right!' interposed Mitchener, soothingly. 'You can send Mr. Bellew the name of the pawnbroker, and he will recover his silver and jewelry. Mrs. Bellew, the curtain is up.' She fluttered softly back to her seat, arranging her airy draperies and flowers, and glanced meaningly at young Mitchener, as if to express disgust for the poor wretch who had bought cast-off clothes to thrust himself in among people whom he regarded as his superiors. David saw it all, and rose from his seat panting and trembling.

'Sit down! Sit down! Kershaw!' said Mitchener, putting his hand on his shoulder. David shook it off.

'No; I've been a fool, but I've done with it all now. I'll send back the clothes—'

'Oh no!' said Mrs. Bellew, looking back with a supercilious smile. 'Pray keep them.'

David left the box and rushing home stunned with rage and shame, tore off the stolen clothes and carried them to Mr. Bellew's house. The next day Mitchener, who had a good deal of kindness and tact, arranged the matter. The pawnbroker, who was a receiver of stolen goods, was forced to give up the plate, jewelry and David's watch. The thieves were discovered and punished.

Mrs. Mitchener, still loyal to her old friend, sent David an invitation to a ball the next week. He declined it. 'I have made a mistake,' he told Jourdan, 'but I will not do it again. My path in life is straight before me. With God's help, I will keep in it.'

His bitter humiliation had taught him juster views of life. As time passed, he made friends among the other students, clever, unpretentious young fellows, who, like himself had their own way to make in life. His college days passed quickly. He studied medicine, and returned to his native town to practice.

Twenty years afterware, Mr. Jourdan Mitchener, passing through this town, now one of the most important cities in Pennsylvania, became suddenly ill, and was attended for several weeks by Dr. Kershaw. He heard from others of the high position held by the physician in the community, not only as the head of his profession, but as an influential citizen, foremost in every good work, the founder of asylums, while his family were the centre of the most cultured circle in the city.

Mitchener had married a very wealthy woman, and had continued to live only in pursuit of fashionable amusement. 'And what have I gained by it?' he thought, bitterly. 'If I were to die to-morrow, I should be remembered only as the man who kept the best French cook in New York.'

'You were right,' he said to the doctor when he came that afternoon. 'You were right to keep your own straight, honorable path, and refuse to ape fashion.'

'I tried it once, you remember,' said the doctor, smiling. 'The most fortunate event of my life was my humiliation about my pawned watch. It was a bitter dose, but it cured me effectually. Every tick of this old watch since'—drawing it out—'has said to me: 'Don't be a snob. Keep steadily on your own path.' I owe much to Mrs. Bellew. Her treatment of me and my foolish act turned me back from the wrong road. It would have made my life a failure.'—Youth's Companion.

Riding an Avalanche.

The Terrible Experience of Two Miners in Colorado.

During the great storm recently two sturdy miners started to ascend one of our neighboring mountains with the intention of working a claim that lay near its crest. They made the trip on Norwegian snow-shoes, on which they worked their way up a narrow gulch leading to their property. As they journeyed on, one of them got to be some two hundred yards in advance of the other, and it was while this distance separated them that the leader by an unhappy step overturned a top-heavy mass of snow and started a dreadful slide. He seized hold of a convenient tree and called to his companion to 'Look out!' The tree was small and bent over under the weight of moving snow. He let go and started with the snow. The long shoes by this time were firmly anchored in the moving mass, and he was hurried along with no power to stop himself by seizing the trees which he passed. Fortunately, he was on the tail end of the avalanche, and thus rode it in safety, with nothing coming behind to cover him up.

When he found he had thus to be an unwilling passenger upon the terrible train he looked ahead to see what had become of his partner. The latter, seeing that there was no escape on either side, turned heels to the roaring mass and started on a life-and-death run right down the gulch. Then followed a wild and thrilling chase. The man who was anchored on top of the snow yelled at the man in front to run, while he who was pursued strained every muscle to keep out of the jaws of the death that was close at his heels. The sight would have been amusing if it had not been of such a serious nature. The race was kept up for more than a mile, and during the entire distance the fellow who was on top kept yelling, "Run, you ——; run," and the hair of the fellow who was running held his hat poised four inches from his head while he headed for the valley. Often the rolling snow struck the heels of his shoes, but it did not quite get him. More quickly than it takes to tell it the hunted man dashed out into the valley, and what he thought was safety. The valley, however, was more dangerous than the mountain, as an unseen gulch crossed it, into which the hunted man fell. Providence, though, was kind to him, for the slide had spent its force, and the snow piled up on the bank over which he had fallen.

When the two were able to look around one was lying at the bottom of the gulch, while the other was seated upon the crust of the snow bank that looked over its edge.—Aspen Times.

Statistics Wouldn't Lie.

A Lover Loses His Sweetheart Through His Knowledge of Figures.

A young English statistician who was paying court to a young lady thought to surprise her with his immense erudition. Producing his note book she thought he was about to indite a love sonnet, but was slightly taken aback by the following question:

'How many meals do you eat a day?'

'Why, three, of course; but of all the oddest questions!'

'Never mind, dear, I'll tell you all about it in a moment.'

His pencil was rapidly at work. At last, fondly clasping her slender waist and——

'Now, my darling, I've got it, and if you wish to know how much has passed through that aporable little mouth in the last seventeen years, I can give you the exact figures.'

'Goodness gracious! What can you mean?'

'Now, just listen,' says he, 'and you will hear exactly what you have been obliged to absorb to maintain those charms which are to make the happiness of my life.'

'But I don't want to hear.'

'Ah, you are surprised, no doubt, but statistics are wonderful things. Just listen. You are now seventeen years old, so that in fifteen years you have absorbed oxen and calves, 5; sheep and lambs, 14; chickens, 327; ducks, 204; geese, 12; turkeys, 100; game of various kinds, 824; fishes, 160; eggs, 324; vegetables (bunches), 700; fruit (baskets), 603; cheeses, 103; bread, cake, &c. (in sacks of flour), 40; wine (barrels), 11; water (gallons), 3,000.'

At this the maiden revolted and, jumping up, exclaimed:

'I think you are very impertinent and disgusting besides, and I will not stay to listen to you!' upon which she flew into the house.

He gazed after her with an abstracted air and left, saying to himself:

'If she kept talking at that rate 12 hours out of 24 her jaws would in 12 years travel a distance of 1,332,124 miles.'

The maiden within two months married a well-to-do grocer, who was no statistician.

Could Not Pay His Bill.

'Now that we are engaged come and let me introduce you to papa,' said Miss Pottleworth.

'I believe I have met him before,' replied young Spickle.

'But in quite another capacity than that of a son-in-law.'

'Yes—er; but I would rather not meet him to-night.'

'Oh, you must.'

And despite the most violent struggles of the young man, he was drawn into the library, where a large, red-faced man, with a squint in one eye and an enlargement of the nose, sat looking over a lot of papers.

'Father,' said the girl.

'Hum!' he replied, without looking up.

'I wish to present you to—'

'What!' he exclaimed, looking up and catching sight of young Spickle. 'Have you the impudence to follow me here? Didn't I tell you that I would see you to-morrow?'

'Why, father, do you know Mr. Spickle?'

'I don't know his name, but I know that he has been to my office three times a day for a week with a bill. I know him well enough. I can't pay that bill to-night, young man. Come to my office to-morrow.'

'I hope you do not think ill of me,' said Spickle. 'I have not come to collect the bill you have reference to, but—'

'What! Got another one?'

'You persist in misunderstanding me. I did not come to collect a bill. I can come to-morrow about that. To-night I proposed to your daughter, and have been accepted. Our mission is to acquaint you with the fact, and gain your consent to our marriage.'

'Well, is that all?' asked the old fellow. 'Blamed if I didn't think you had a bill. Take the girl, if that's what you want. But say, didn't I tell you to bring the bill to-morrow?'

'Yes, sir.'

'Well, you needn't. Our relations are different now. Wish I had a daughter for every bill collector in town.

Electricity has been used in England to drive a threshing machine.

A high hill at Chimapia, in Mexico, was lately split completely in two by an earthquake.

Paper shoes are now made in England with success. They are made of papier mache, and answer in all respects the purposes of leather.

In Scotland inoculation for pleuro-pneumonia has been performed on cattle with good success. The operation was performed on the lower joint of the tail. Why that was necessary is not plain, especially as the animals thereby lost part of their tails.

My First Antelope.

David W. Judd writes from the Far West to the American Agriculturist for November:

An incident to-day recalls my first antelope. Equipped with Sharp Carbines and Winchesters, supplied with provisions for three weeks, we pushed southward from Laramie, Wyoming Territory—Auditor Weston, of Nebraska, his son Ralph, Tim Foley, the well-known frontiersman, a trusty guide, and the writer. It was a bright, crisp morning, and in that peculiar atmosphere Sheep Mountain, seemed but five miles away, though the distance proved to be more than twenty. Before noon the antelope began to appear in the distance, and, as we approached the mountain, occasional small droves trotted leisurely by and whirled with eager curiosity to turn and gaze at us. Then after them we would go as fast as our horses could carry us, emptying chamber after chamber of cartridges, but with no seeming effect. Army officers stationed near hear and elsewhere on the frontier have frequently run them down with greyhounds. It is reported of one of Gen. Stanley's dogs that he brought to bay and "downed" twenty-four antelope on a single expedition. We loaded and unloaded our rifles all the afternoon without striking, as far as we could ascertain, a single antelope, though several jack rabbits and an occasional sage hen rewarded our constant fusilade. On the second day we were glad enough, after our long ride, to lay up for repairs at Pinkham's, in North Park, Colorado. Here droves of antelope were seen in large numbers at a distance. Chafing under my constant failure to bring one down, I determined on resorting to the old ruse of "flagging" them. Possessed with incordinate curiosity, they can sometimes be drawn within shooting distance by raising one's handkerchief on the tip of the rifle or on a pole suspended above the long grass in which the hunter is concealed. At early daybreak I started off alone, stealthily crawling through the grass toward a small drove in foot hills a mile or more away. After maneuvering in this manner for a full half hour, I got within less than six hundred yards of the game unperceived. I then attracted their attention, and the animals, after approaching me for some distance, came to a halt. I then took deliberate aim at what appeared to be a noble buck, and enjoyed the exhilerating satisfaction of seeing the animal stagger and fall. Imagine my chagrin and sorrow, however, when, upon mounting my broncho, and quickly riding to the stricken antelope, I found a doe bleeding to death with two fawns standing over her. Instead of trotting away at my approach, they remained by the dying doe, and with their beautiful gazelle eyes, bestowed such looks of piteous reproach as one could never forget. It was a sight which occasioned no little remorse, and though the succeeding days we were constantly surrounded by the antelope in close proximity, I could not bring myself to shoot at one of them again while we remained on the expedition, excepting one morning when we were out of supplies. We subsequently killed our Rocky Mountain lion and other game, but the antelope, so far as I was concerned, remained undisturbed.

How He Once Ran a Locomotive.

They were gathered in the office telling railroad yarns. Colonel Bob Leach was one of the party. 'Gentlemen,' said he, 'I don't know how fast an engine can travel, but I'll give you an idea of how fast one did go. During the war I run a scouting engine for the Confederate governmet. It was my duty to carry a telegraph operator, who, at different points, would cut the wires and send dispatches. We were running at a rapid rate one day, when, upon rounding a curve, I saw a thousand gun barrels blaze in the sunlight. I also saw that a number of cross ties had been piled on the track. To stop in time was an impossibility; to go on seemed certain death, for even if we escaped being killed by the wrecking of the engine we would be shot to death, for we were regarded as spies. I decided in a second what to do. Telling my companion to lie down in the tender, I seized the throttle, and, in locomotive parlance, threw her wide open. The engine jumped like a rabbit. I threw myself flat in the tender, expecting every moment to be hurled to an awful death. Bang, bang, bang! went the guns. Then all was silent, save the whir whir of the wheels. Could it be possible that the engine had knocked off the obstructions? I arose and looked out. We had passed the enemy and had scattered the ties. My companion, as much astonished as myself, got up. I looked back, and just above the tender I saw what I took to be a swarm of big black flies. I reached out and took hold of one. Gracious! I then discovered what they were. They were a shower of bullets that the enemy had fired after us. Well, we ran along at this rate until all the bullets fell behind. Then we slacked up. The gentlemen looked at one another, but no one disputed the statement.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Pennsylvania Republican

Contrary to the expectations of a majority of Democrats the state of Pennsylvania redeemed its republican reputation and elected James A. Beaver, of Bellefonte, Governor of Pennsylvania by a plurality of 41,000. We all know what this means. The day of bossism and corporations has come again, and anti-discrimination and other vital reform meanures must be considered defeated. Mr. Beaver's bitter partisan spirit is sufficiently known to Democrats for them to expect any endorsement of Democratic reform principles. The machine is back in the old rut and all that is left for us is to take defeat gracefully and try, try again the next time. If the people of this state can afford to be governed by the old machine bosses we must simply make up our mind to stand it.

There is little upon which to base an estimate of the Prohibition vote, but it will hardly exceed 25,000.

Of the twenty-eight Congressmen elected in Pennsylvania on Tuesday nineteen areRepublican and nine Democratic.

In the next Legislature the Republicans will retain control of both branches. The returns indicate the following composition of the new legislature: Senate—Republicans, 35; Democrats, 15; House—Republicans, 126; Democrats, 75.

20th Congressional District.

The latest reliable news which we received last evening before going to press gave the election of Patton, the Republican candidate for Congress, with a majority of about200. The majorities of the five counties composing the district are reported as follows:

Centre,	Hall,	38,
Elk,	"	1150,
Union,	Patton,	850,
Mifflin,	"	287
Clearfield,	"	150
Clinton,	"	87.

Centre County.

We are glad to say that the Democrats were victorious in the county in spite of the bitter fight which was made against some of our candidates both by Republicans and "kicking" Democrats. The whole ticket is elected by majorities ranging from 150 to 400. Hurrah for Rhone, Woodward, Shaeffer, Meyer and Reifsnyder!

Having neither time nor space to publish the official returns in detail this week we will do so in our next issue.

NEW YORK CITY elected Abram S. Hewitt, Democrat, for Mayor by a fair majority.

ELECTIONS were held on Tuesday in thirty-five states, but we are not able to give the results this week.

A REPUBLICAN in a recent issue of the Philadelphia Times suggests the choice of Governor Pattison as the democratic candidate for the office of Mayor of Philadelphia, and intimates that in case of Pattison's candidacy many republicans will support him. Since Governor Pattison made such a splendid record as controller of the Quaker city it is more than probable that such would be the case.

THE mouths of those who declare President Cleveland a copperhead and rebel should be effectually closed by the President's distinct and unmistakable words in his address to the Virginians on the 21st of last month, when he said that unwavering loyality to the union and a warm love for the whole American nation is their highest duty and the best guarantee of lasting prosperity. Well spoken.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30, 1886.

It is remarkable but true that the Government offices of theUnitedStates, here and elsewhere, with their 130,000 employes, are going on in their work with industry and regularity. This state of things is unparalleled. It has had no existence except in the dreams of enthusiasts. But to make the surprise more surprising, this reform has been brought about by the unredeemed and irredeemable, too utterly unspeakably bad Democrats. Has the tongue of the radical harranguer lost its lubricity? Have the fictions with which he was want to rally the rural republican become threadbare? Why is this thus? What mean these moss grown stumps no longer pressed by the number nines of frontier Blaineites? Where is our once untamed and rampant for bread and butter Republican oratorical mendacity? Come with me, reader, and you shall see him. Here he sits in the Patent Office examining an application for a patent on a churn or bustle or an improved baby walker. There he is in the Pension office, hard at legitimate work under Democratic Commissioner Black, who with a smaller force passed many more pension cases than any Republican commissioner,and paid $8,000,000 more in pensions than Republican Dudley, his predecessor. You see him in the Treasury Department, in the Land Office, the Indian Office, the Post Office Department—everywhere hard at work. How tame he looks. He will not hurt you. His malign energy is scotched. There is a restless pent-upness about him. It seems abnormal to him to be confined to honest work during a political campaign,but he will get used to it; it will not kill him. By and by the novel idea that he is paid to work for the United States and not for the Republican party will take root in the worn soil of his moral sense. His inocuous political desuetude will be a blessing to the country.

What wonderful changes have taken place in tweaty months! They have overcome us like a summer cloud, not dark and portentious, but big with salubrious showers.

Twenty months ago, the property owners in Washington were despondent. It was predicted that a Democratic President would dismiss all the office holders, that five thousand owners of homes in Washington would have to sell at a loss, and that a fall in real estate would follow. The result has been the reverse of that predicted. Instead of wholesale dismissals, only the idle, the incompetent and the dissipated were cast out. The health, the moral tone and efficiency of the public service was greatly improved. An improvement in real estate and in general business followed as a natural result. The Government employ and his dependants, who compose fully one half the population of Washington, no longer feel that their living depends upon political service, or upon the ins and outs of political parties. He has become a changed man—more respected by others, having more respect for himself. His credit is better, and now, instead of selling his home, he holds it at a higher price. Hundreds who have heretofore rented property or lived in boarding houses, are buying and building. One more term of honest Democratic Administration will place the National Capital on the solid ground of assured prosperity. It will require another term to enable the tree of political life which Cleveland has planted and watered, to take root and bear fruit. Should Blaine or Logan or Sherman come in two years hence, it would surely be uprooted.

I believe that a large majority of office holders here are no longer Republicans. They enjoy a security under civil service reform that they have never known before, and they are compelled to see every day the improvements which the Cabinet officers and the heads of divisions under Mr Cleveland have introduced. They are made to do more work for the government, but they are no longer required to do dirty and dishonest work for the Republican party. They are not harrassed day and night with the reflection that unless they assist in the re-election of this member of Congress or that Senator, they will lose his influence, and lose their bread and butter.

THE PREMIUM ENGRAVING issued by "Peterson's Magazine"—that paragon of lady's-books—for getting up clubs for 1887, is of very great beauty. It is a first-class line-and-stipple engraving, executed in the highest style of art—size, 21 inches by 27—called 'Mother's Darling," and would be an ornament, framed, for any parlor. "Peterson" for 1887 is to be greatly improved, many new writers coming to the front in it. Six copyright novelets will be given, by such first-class writers as Mrs. John Sherwood, Edgar Fawcett, Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, Frank Lee Benedict, Mrs. M. V. Spencer, and that rising New Orleans delineator of creole life, the author of "Creole Blossoms," etc., etc. Another of the premiums is the "Book of Beauty," illustrated with steel-engravings. Another is an extra copy of the magazine. You can earn any of them, or all, by raising clubs for "Peterson." Specimens of the magazine sent, gratis, to those wishing to get up clubs,if written for in good faith. Address Charles J. Peterson,306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

W. D. Hoyt & Co., Wholesale and Retail Druggists of Rome, Ga., say; We have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery, Electric Bitters and Bucklen's Arnica Salve for two years. Have never handled remedies that sell as well, or give such universal satisfaction. There have been some wonderful cures effected by these medicines in this city. Eisenhuth.

THE FIRST KEEN TWINGE.—As the season advances, the pains and aches by which rheumatism makes itself known, are experienced after every exposure. It is not claimed that Hood's Sarsaparilla is specific for rheumatism—we doubt if there is or can be, such a remedy. But the thousands benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla, warrant us in urging others who suffer from rheumatism to take it before the first keen twinge.

THE U. S. Dispensatory and the Science of Chemistry justify the assertion that for tonic, diaphoretic and expectorant properties, no combination of remedies can be deviged to equal in power and efficacy Dr. Kessler's Celebrated English Cough Medicine. It is a safe and reliable standby in case of croup and whooping-cough. Dissatisfied purchasers can have their money refunded.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—President Cleveland has issued a proclamation, designating Thursday, November 25,as a day of thanksgiving and prayer.

Fire in a Gas Well Still Raging.

CONNELSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 31.—The fire at the Standard gas well near Mt. Pleasant, which originated yesterday forenoon, is still raging and is hourly gaining headway. The flames and smoke, driven by a strong current of air, leap from the mouth of the shaft to a heighth of 100 feet above the ground. All efforts to check the fire have been of no avail. A fire engine from Pittsburg arrived to-night and the work of flooding the mine will be begun at once. This will require several months. It is thought that nearly three acres of coal are now ablaze. The amount of loss cannot be estimated for the entire plant will have to suspend operations for several months, thus throwing 600 men out of employment. The daily output of the shaft was 1,500 tons, and in consequence of its being idle, it will result in the closing down of 500 coke ovens, or one-twentieth of the whole Connelsville region.

Bartholdi's Beacon of Brotherhood Unveiled.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The great bronze statue of Liberty Enlightening the Word, designed by M. Auguste F. Bartholdi, was unveiled on Bedloe's Island, in New York Bay, to-day. The impressive ceremonies arranged for the occasion were interferred with by the inclemency of the weather, which finally turned to rain, but the programme was carried out in spite of this serious drawback, and attracted enormous crowds of people. The ceremonies began with a grand military and civic parade in the city, followed by an imposing display by the fleet in the harbor. The exercises on the island included the firing of a signal gun; prayer by the Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D. D; an address by Comte Ferdinand de Lesseps on behalf of the Franco-American Union; the presentation of the statue in an address by Senator William M. Evarts; the unveiling, to the accompaniment of a salvo from all the guns in the harbor; the acceptance of the statue by President Cleveland; an address by M. A. Lefaivre, Minister Plenipotentiary and Delegate Extraordinary, on behalf of the French Republic; a commemorative address by Hon. Chauncey M. Depew; the singing of the Doxology to the tune of "Old Hundred;" the pronouncing of the benediction by Right Rev. Henry Potter, D. D., and the firing of a national salute from all the batteries in the harbor, ashore and afloat. This evening the statue was Pluminated by electricity, and there was a display of fireworks on Beldo's and Governor's Islands and the Battery.

Rowan, the Sheriff of Philadelphia, Growing Worse.

Sheriff Rowan's condition is now considered almost hopeless by his friends, and it is admitted that since his removal to Ereildoun he has become worse rather than better. Though quiet at times, at others he becomes so violent that several attendants are needed to restrain him. He suffers from insomnia, and is extremely restless, pacing excitedly up and down within the limits allowed him and strongly resenting the restraint put upon him. The physicians are seeking to secure as much rest for the patient as possible, but have not succeeded as well as they could wish. It is doubted by those best acquainted with the Sheriff's condition whether he will ever be able to resume the duties of his office again.

An Official Shot.

A Discharged Custom-House Employe's Revenge.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—While sitting in his office shortly after 12 o'clock today Surveyor H. S. Beattie was shot twice and severely wounded by Louis Bieral,whom the Surveyor had recently dismissed from the custom's service for having exacted from an immigrant girl $2 duty upon an American sewing machine Three shots were fired, two of which took effect. One bullet passed through the fleshy part of the Surveyor's left hand,and the other struck the crest of the illum, glancing in an inward and upward direction. Surgeon Beattie, attached to the Custom House, was summoned, and after examination he concluded that the wounds were not of a serious character.

After the shooting and before assistance had reached the Surveyor, Bieral ran out of the Surveyor's private office, in the back part of the building, fronting on William street, pistol in hand, and ran through the corridor to the exit into Hanover street. A man attempted to stop him and he yelled: "If you touch me I'll kill you." The man stepped back,and Bieral ran along to Beaver street, into which he turned, and ran to the Cotton Exchange, a number of cititens following in pursuit. Finding escape impossible he turned and ran into the arms of a policeman. He was taken to the Old Slip station-house and locked up —Photographer Buck took a negative of the new hardware building the other day. We believe it is the intention of the proprietors, Messrs. Musser & Smith to procure an electrotype of their place of business for advertising purposes. A good plan.

—Frank Kauffman came up from Northumberland county after he had voted for Black on Tuesday to tell us that Beaver would be elected by a large majority. Well, his head was level on that point. DR. SAWBONES says that the surest way to take a cold is to be always hugging the stove. —On Tuesday the central part of Main street was the liveliest part of town by many odds. Clusters of men were continually occupying the corners and were busy discussing the chances of electing their respective party tickets. At the same time a gentleman from Richmond, Va., was engaged in explaining the merits of a patent gate a sample of which he had on exhibition at the old hardware corner.

—Delicate persons, and all whose systems have become debilitated should bear in mind that Simmons Liver Regulator is not a drastic, purging medicine, does not weaken or deplete the system as other purgatives do, but acts gently. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage to lead to intemperance; will promote digestion, dissipate headache, and generally tone up the system.

Hon. Alex. H. Stephens, of Ga., says: "Simmons Liver Regulator is mild and suits me better than more active remedies."

DEATH'S WORK.—On Thursday night Mrs. William Bright of this place died after an illness of several weeks at her residence on Main street. She was the second victim of the typhoid fever epidemic in this town. Her death was a hard stroke for her husband who is now the father of four orphans. Mrs. Bright was a helpmeet to her husband in the truest sense of the word and a very kind and loving mother to her children. She was a daughter of Michael Frank, dec'd, late of Penn township and has four sisters and one brother who survive her. Deceased was buried in Fairview Cemetery on Sunday forenoon, when a large concourse of relatives and friends followed her remains to the grave, giving evidence of the general esteem in which she was held by the community. The funeral services were held in the U. B. church, and were conducted by Rev. Wortman, the pastor. His text was taken from Phillippians I: 21. "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." Sarah Elizabeth Bright was born March 30th 1844, and reached the age of 42 years and 7 months, lacking 1 day.

ANOTHER DEATH occurred in town on Monday morning, the victim being John Swartz, of North street, an old and much respected citizen of Millheim. He died of heart disease and his end came very suddenly. He was working in his yard on said morning, when he fell over and expired. The news of his death was a surprise to everybody as he was seen in town a few days before, apparently in usual health. He leaves a widow and several grown and married children to mourn his death. Deceased was well known in this section of the county as a hardworking, neighborly and peace-loving citizen. His funeral took place yesterday afternoon, when the services were held in the U. B. church.

DEATH AGAIN.—It is with sorrow and sympathy that we announce the death of the infant son of Mr. & Mrs. A. F. Harter, which was caused by cholera infantum. The little one died at the residence of the bereaved mother's parents yesterday afternoon, about 4 o'clock, and was not quite a year old. Having been the first-born the young parents were naturally fondly attached to the child and their grief is consequently keen. But the One that has given has seen fit to take away and He will be best able to console the mourners. Funeral Friday forenoon.

—The very welcome letters which Mr. & Mrs. S. D. Musser receive from their oldest daughter, Miss Mable, show that the young lady is progressing splendidly with her studies and that she is forming a high opinion of Lutherville Seminary and its teachers. Both parents and daughter look forward with pleasure to the holiday vacation, when Mable will spend a few weeks in the beloved home circle.

—Last night a week ago W. G. Rook, familiarly called Parker, was in a "stew" and things about the National looked blue. But with the dawn of Thursday morning Parker's face began to look brighter and everybody marveled at the pleasant change that graced his visage. Upon inquiry we received his cheerful answer in substantially these words—"Oh it's the dearest little landlady that ever came to this world." That explained all and we are glad to learn that all parties concerned are doing finely and that the happy pater is as proud as a king. Here goes —— —A report has been circulating in our neighboring valleys for the last week or so that Millheim had anywhere from 50 to 100 typhoid fever cases. This is a base misrepresentation of the facts. The fever visited only three families in town, the number of patients all told being seven. Two of these have died, while the other five have about recovered. That is all that is of it and the parties who are given to so much exaggeration would better bridle their loose tongues. Our physicians think that since the late rains the back of the epidemic is broken and the sanitary condition of this neighborhood greatly improved.

THE HUSBAND'S POCKET-BOOK.—There has been quite a lively discussion going on in THE HOUSEKEEPER as to whether the family pocket book belongs to the husband, the wife, or a little of both. One thing is sure, the pocket-book ought to be open long enough for the wife to get one dollar to pay for THE HOUSEKEEPER one year, especially as the publishers send the last three numbers of 1886, all of 1887, and a choice collection of imported bulbs for fall planting or forcing for winter blooming in the house, to any new subscriber who orders now, so as to get the first numbers of the story by the brilliant new editor, Maud Meredith. Address for premium list and full particulars, Buckeye Publishing Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

—The work of building the foundation walls for the Knitting factory will most likely be completed in a week, and John Kerstetter, Jr., who was awarded the superintendency of the carpenter work, will begin on his work as soon as the walls are finished. He says that he will have the building under roof and ready for the plasterers in less than three weeks. John knows whereof he speaks as he is the boss builder in this section of country and we have not the least doubt that under his hands the job will be done satisfactory to all parties.

—On Saturday, the 23rd ult., the joint council of the Rebersburg charge of the Lutheran church, Rev. E. Lenhart, pastor, met in special meeting for the purpose of consulting in regard to the fitness of selling their parsonage and the feacibility of erecting a new one. The several churches composing the charge were well represented and love, union and generosity characterized the meeting. These characteristics of apparent success in the contemplated project were looked upon by the pastor with much pleasure. After mutual and due consideration of the matter in hand it was resolved that the present parsonage be sold at public sale on the 13th instant, in the forenoon at 10 o'clock. It is hoped that the membership will sustain the much-needed action of their representatives and do themselves credit by pushing the project unabatedly.

FINE TIMBERLAND AND A GOOD FARM FOR SALE.—On Friday, November 12th, 1886, at 1 o'clock, p. m. there will be offered at Orphan's Court Sale a tract of land containing 370 ACRES, late the property of Chas. Ripka, deceased, and situate in Gregg township, Centre Co., Pa. Seventy acres thereof are cleared and fit for cultivation; 50 acres are ordinary timberland, the remaining 250 acres are the best timberland in the county. This part of the tract contains TWO MILLION FEET of the BESST WHITE PINE TIMBER in Penns Valley and THREE MILLION FEET of EXCELLENT HEMLOCK, also good oak and other wood. The tract is but four miles from the L. & T. railroad with a good road leading to Spring Mills. This timberland will be offered seperately from the farmland and affords a rare opportunity for lumber operations. There will also be sold a GOOD FARM, in the best state of cultivation and with good buildings erected thereon. Terms: One-fourth of purchase mony on confirmation of sale, balance in two equal annual payments, with interest and usual securities. 40 4t

OBITUARY.—Rachel, the wife of Anthony Bierly, who recently died at Rebersburg aged 75 years, 8 months and 13 days, was the daughter of Henry and Margaret Ruhl and was born in York county, Pa., Feb. 8th, 1811, from where she emigrated with some of her relatives to Centre county, when but a youth. Her parents having died at the old home she was left to the care of others. She grew up to the years of accountability and womanhood and with her associates she was placed under the pastoral care of Rev. Heines, who instructed and received her into full membership of the Evangelical Lutheran church at Rebersburg by the writ of confirmation.

On December 12th, 1830 she united with Mr. Bierly in holy matrimony and was blessed with ten children—two sons and eight daughters. Two of the daughters preceded her to the spirit world while the rest and their father were left to mourn her loss.

For 36 years she was an invalid, suffering from a paralytic stroke. All this time she was speechless and at times suffered excruciating pain. The frequent repetition of paralytic strokes increased her suffering and confined her to her bed where she expired Oct. 21st, 1886. All these many years of suffering she, like Job, manifested great patience and trust in the Providence of God. E. L.

IN MEMORIAM.—At a regular meeting of the U. B. Sunday school, of Millheim, held Oct. 24th, 1886, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted.

WHEREAS it has pleased our Heavenly Father in his allwise Providence to remove from our midst our esteemed and beloved school-mate Wm. Miller,

Resolved, That we humbly and meekly bow in submission to our Father's divine will,

2nd, That in the death of Wm. Miller our school has lost a faithful member,

3rd, That while we deeply mourn our loss we will cherish his memory for his unselfish, kind and amiable disposition,

4th, That we as a Sunday school deeply sympathize with the parents in this hour of their sad bereavement and commend them to the care of their Heavenly Father who doeth all things well,

5th, That these resolutions be entered upon the records of our school, and be published in the Millheim Journal and in the Itinerant and a copy of each be sent to the parents of the deceased.

—The following item appeared in the Sunday Times, Philadelphia, last week, as a Pittsburg Dispatch and as it speaks of the Penns Caves, situate midways between this place and Bellefonte it will be perused with interest by many of our readers:

A CAVE IN CENTRE COUNTY.

Penn Cave, of Bellefonte, Pa., is of very recent discovery. It has just gotten over the noyelty of christening. It is a second Luray cavern, and if it were the property of an enterprising man it would rise to fame. A farmer, while plowing, accidentally discovered it some few years ago. He has done nothing more to it than to open an entrance in the hillock and build for himself a boat to accommodate the hundreds of curiosity seekers who come and go. Even so distinguished a celebrity as Ex-Governor Curtin, who lives in Bellefonte, has had no influence to bring the marvel into worthy prominence. We reached it six miles out of town by special conveyance. We called the farmer from his plow and gave him a quarter dollar fee each, and so were conducted into the wonder. The farmer showman was no expert at the oar. He paddled from behind and illumined the way with a lantern affixed to the prow. Understand, the cavern is dark from the start, and it must be seen all through in a boat. Water pervades it and the pendant cones that drop like icicles everywhere allow a passageway, through which you ply your boat. The formation of stalagmite and stalactites presents the most fantistic spectacle in the glare of the torch. The spectral reflections on the water, with the splash blind fish, make the quarter mile journey a weird one. You reach the end wall, through which there is a small opening, and by which you may have an extended vista with the light—the dream of greater wonders undiscovered. The progressive genius of the outside world does not forget itself here, for cards of all kinds adorn this subterranean bill-board. The cave is a grand study, and it will repay all tourists to see it.

Neighboring News.

REBERSBURG.

Geo. Wate, of Mt. Garman, is at present here visiting his friends and relatives.

Geo. Rule sold his farm to John Stover, of near Fiedler's, Haines twp., for $1600.

James Frank has the comtract for gathering up the cream through this neighborhood for the Spring Mills creamery.

Wm. Kreamer, who was to Vicksburg one day last week attending a horse sale returned home with a fine percheron colt, 2 years old, which tips the scales at 1325.

Harvey Corman, who with his family left last spring for Valley Falls, Kansas, with the intention of locating there permanently, arrived in town last Wednesday. Harvey thinks there is no place like Brushvalley. The band boys gave him a good serenade on Wednesday evening which would indicate that Harvey has many friends in this section.

Thos. Walker and Newton Brumgart were off to Nittany buying up sheep and returned with a fine lot. Among the flock we noticed several Holstein calves.

Two of our young fellows heard the report of Cuba's destruction and thought it would cause a sugar panic. They hastened to buy up a large quantity of that article for the purpose of speculating. But alas, Cuba is still there, and so is their sugar. It can be bought at cost. We truly sympathize with these young men.

Austin Gramley sold his farm, known as the Kleckner home, to Joseph Moyer, of Centre Mills. Austin afterwards bought the northern part of the old homestead, Gramley's farm, and has already broken ground to erect buildings thereon.

Wes. Snyder's corn huskers found an ear of corn that has 1170 grains. That's a big ear.

Philip Gramley had Griffin Garrett, that boss carpenter, remodeld the interior of his house and Philip's residence is now one of handsomest homes around here.

We hope there will be soon an end to this masquerading business. It is anything but creditable for a married woman to walk around town in men's apparel. It's a trifle too bold and if the lady has no respect for herself she should have some for her husband. Let the occurrence the other day be the last of the kind.

Some mean thief found his way to Wes. Snyder's oats box and helped himself. Wes thinks it rather "cheeky" and if the theft is repeated he will receive the parties with about two ounces of shot. SQUIBOC.

MADISONBURG.

J. L. Roush was at home on Tuesday to vote for Black.

Rev. Basom's father and brother spent a few days with him last week.

Mrs. Jacob Kern and her mother, Mrs. Reber returned home on Monday evening from their vist to New Berlin.

H. R. Fiedler has planted some ninety maple trees along the road from John Shafer's lane down to his own land. If he can find time he expects to continue at the stopping place and plant as far as the line between him and Stover.

The hog disease is coming quite close to our town. Em'l Harter lost two fattening hogs last week. Michael Rishel had the same misfortune.

Miss Fairy Shafer, after a three month's visit among friends in and about town returned home to Reading on Saturday morning.

Our townsman John Shafer talks of adopting Harry Kline as his son ere long.

The Reformed congregation have planted quite a nice lot of maple trees around their church.

STILL ANOTHER.

AARONSBURG.

Holloway Crouse from Lock Haven was here during last Sabbath.

Sanford, senior typo of the Journal office, paid us a visit on last Saturday evening.

The attendance at the Prohibition lecture last week was very small.

Charles Stambach went to Lock Haven to do general stable and house work for a party whose name we have not yet learned.

Jerry Kline who had the misfortune to break his collar bone in falling from a load of corn fodder about ten days ago is doing finely at this writing.

Rev. Yearick (Ref.) held communion services in the Reformed church at this place last Sunday.

Our merchants are having a general cleaning up. This no doubt means that they will soon get in their fall stock of merchandise.

B. O. Deininger, of the Journal Book store, dropped in to see us one day last week. B O., I guess, felt like making us a Black speech, but he received no invitation to do so.

Quite a large number of our citizens attended the funeral of Mrs. Wm. Bright at Millheim on last Sunday.

With the exception of a few Prohibition speeches, Aaronsburg steered clear of all public political excitement. Just as well it was so.

Charles Musser has again returned to school at Lewisburg. We take it for granted by Charley's return that there is no more typhoid fever there.

DID it ever occur to you, thoughtful and prudent reader, that Dr. Kessler's Celebrated English Cough Medicine must be an article of real merit, or how could the manufacturer ever be able to advertise "money refunded to all dissatisfied purchasers."

Home Evidence

No other preparation has won success at home equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. In Lowell, Mass., where it is made, it is now, as it has been for years, the leading medicine for purifying the blood, and toning and strengthening the system. This "good name at home" is "a tower of strength abroad."

People of Lowell

It would require a volume to print all Lowell people have said in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mr. Albert Estes, living at 28 East Pine Street, Lowell, for 15 years employed as boss carpenter by J. W. Bennett, president of the Erie Telephone Company, had a large running sore come on his leg, which troubled him a year, when he began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. The sore soon grew less in size, and in a short time disappeared.

Praise Hood's Sarsaparilla

Jos. Dunphy, 214 Central Street, Lowell, had swellings and lumps on his face and neck, which Hood's Sarsaparilla completely cured.

Mrs. C. W. Marriott, wife of the First Assistant Fire Engineer of Lowell, says that for 16 years she was troubled with stomach disorder and sick headache, which nothing relieved. The attacks came on every fortnight, when she was obliged to take her bed, and was unable to endure any noise. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after a time the attacks ceased entirely.

Many more might be given had we room. On the recommendation of people of Lowell, who know us, we ask you to try

School Ships of the Sailor.

What the Boys who go on the Training Ships Have to do.

The real schooling of the sailor boys does not begin until they are transferred to the training ship at Newport. While aboard the Minnesota they are piped out of their hammocks every morning by a shrill note from the boatswain's whistle followed by the sing-song cry: "All hands—up all hammocks." The cry is taken up and passed along from hammock to hammock by the waking boys until all have tumbled out. Then there is a great scurrying to see who will be dressed and have his hammock and bedding lashed up first. The hammocks are stowed in a netting on the deck above during the day. The boys are forbidden to lay their hammocks on the deck or across the guns, but must hold them from the time they are carried to the span deck until they are taken by the stower. A few hours are spent every morning in washing down the decks and polishing the brass work about the ship. At noon all hands are piped down to dinner, and at sunset the bugler sounds a call for hauling down the colors. Five minutes later comes supper. After supper hammocks are piped down, at eight bells tattoo is sounded, and an hour later the crew is ordered to turn in and keep silence.

Talking after bedtime, swearing, fighting and other boyish offenses are punished in several original ways, the most common of which is to make the offender "toe a seem" for several minutes at a time or send him aloft to "keep a mast-head lookout." Boys who are careless about their clothes or their hammocks are obliged to carry them on their shoulders for an hour or two every morning until they are cured. Solitary confinement on bread and water for five days is the severest punishment which the naval regulations permit, except it be awarded by a court martial. Only boys between the ages of fourteen and eighteen years are received at the training-ship. From the moment an apprentice enlists his pay is $9 per month and he is placed in a class, where he acquires the rudiments of his prospective profession as a sailor. They are allowed pocket money and a reasonable amount of leave of absence and can visit their homes twice a year while in the waters of the United States. In addition to studying arithmetic, geography and United States history while on the training-ships, the boys are given regular practice in boxing, fencing, rowing and sailing boats. When qualified for sea they are drafted to a cruising practice ship and visit Europe or the West Indies. After returning to the United States and visiting home for ten days or two weeks, boys are transferred to naval vessels in all parts of the world. This is usually about fifteen months after enlistment, and he is not apt to be changed again until he is of age. Then he may receive his discharge or be re-enlisted at will.
